Abstract An analysis of stools samples examined during a period of two years, from January, 1988 to December, 1989 in Jos University Teaching Hospital was carried out. Of the 15634 people examined during this period, 6698 were males while 8936 were females. Monoparasitism occurred in 4364 persons, while polyparasitism occurred in 240 persons. Several parasites were identified in these cases.
